Humphrey aide named in milk probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jack L. Chestnut, former campaign manager for Hubert H. Humphrey, has been named in a sworn statement as the man who set up an illegal $12,000 corporate payment for Humphrey's 1970 Senate campaign.

Barry Nova, an advertising executive who worked on the campaign, said in a sworn, notarized statement that Chestnut asked him to submit $12,000 worth of Humphrey advertising

Three firms boost gasoline prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Standard Oil of California, Shell Oil Co. and Texaco Inc. have raised the price of wholesale gasoline one cent a gallon, and the increase is expected to be passed on to consumers.

The three companies say the higher prices, put into effect this week, are the result of changes in the cost of foreign crude oil. Federal energy regulations allow oil companies to adjust their prices once a month to reflect such changes.

The changes are to be passed along to consumers at gasoline stations owned by the companies, and independent service station operators are expected to raise their prices also.

Late last month, Gulf Oil Co. said it was able to find lower crude oil costs, and it reduced wholesale prices by 1.6 cents per gallon, effective July 26. The federal energy guidelines say such decreases must be passed on to consumers by independent dealers.

Texaco raised its prices on Monday, and Shell put its increase into effect on Thursday.

The Standard Oil of California (SoCal) increase also went into effect Thursday, bringing retail prices of gasoline to 57.9 cents a gallon for regular, 58.9 cents for unleaded and 61.1 cents for premium at company-

Scott levels blast

CHICAGO (AP) — The Illinois Commerce Commission, accused of failure to enforce railroad safety regulations, says it needs additional manpower.

Atty. Gen. William J. Scott, referring to an explosion in Decatur on July 19 that ripped through a freight yard, killing seven persons, accused the ICC Friday of neglecting its role to insure rail safety.

He said the Decatur tragedy could have been prevented "if the commission had heeded a complaint from a railroad worker warning of dangerous conditions" in the freight yard.

"This complaint was received two months before the accident," Scott said, "but incredibly the commission referred it to his union."

Two pesticides banned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency has banned manufacture of two pesticides suspected of causing cancer. The agency also warns of possible health hazards if Congress fails to pass additional legislation to control harmful chemicals.

The agency Friday placed the ban on the pesticides aldrin and dieldrin as "an unacceptably high cancer risk."

EPA administrator Russell E. Train cited findings of dieldrin, which is chemically related to aldrin, in a wide range of foods and noted that dieldrin caused tumors in mice.

Meanwhile, other EPA officials said the agency is seriously concerned about the lack of authority for EPA to test chemicals in public commerce for their possible ability to induce cancer or other serious health effects.

Deputy Administrator John R. Quarles Jr. urged a congressional conference committee to work out a final version of legislation authorizing EPA to test toxic chemicals and, where necessary, ban their sale.

Without such testing, serious health effects may not be detected until they show up among the public, EPA officials said.

Third printing of lottery tickets

CHICAGO (AP) — A "third edition" of one million Illinois State Lottery tickets has been ordered and distributed by Supt. Ralph Batch.

The latest printing brought the number of tickets available before the Aug. 8 first drawing to 14 million.

The drawing will be by the Illinois State Fairgrounds in Springfield.

Demand for the 50-cent tickets has been considerably greater than expected by lottery officials.

Batch started with 9 million tickets in distribution and a 2 million reserve on Tuesday. Before the day was out, the reserve was exhausted.

"We will fight this attempt to suspend our insecticide," Shell spokesman Norman Alstedter said. "There is no evidence whatsoever to associate this chemical with cancer in man."

"U.S. agriculture will now be in short supply of pesticides it vitally needs for top production of corn, the nation's single most important crop in 1975," the Shell spokesman said.

Warren's reference to the proceeding as political marked an apparent shift in White House strategy. Previously, he and other spokesmen have stressed the legal aspects of the proceeding and contended that

Turkish Cypriot calls for federation

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Turkish Cypriot leader Rauf Denkash called today for a complete federation in Cyprus, as Turkish and Greek military officers met again to draw up truce lines and U.N. enforced buffer zones on the embattled Mediterranean island.

Denkash, speaking shortly after his arrival in Ankara for talks with Turkish leaders, did not elaborate on the concept but said it would be different from Turkish Cypriot demands for local autonomy before the July 15 coup toppled President Makarios and led to the Turkish invasion of the island.

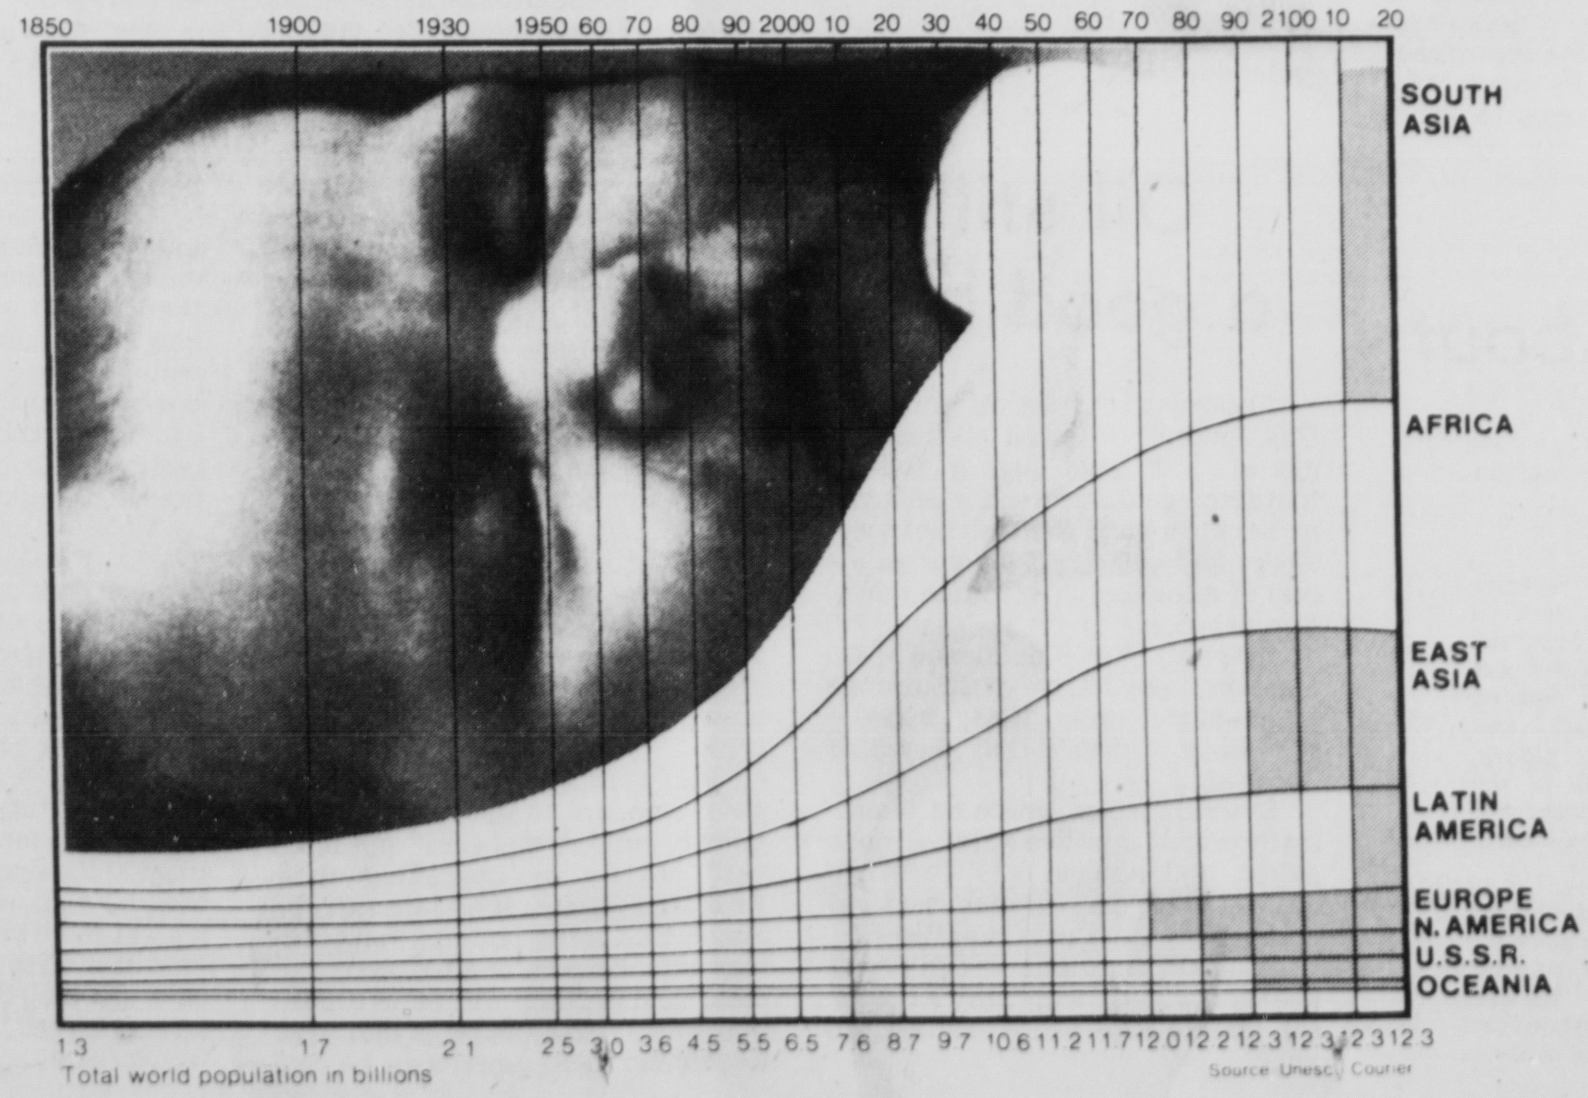

In earlier statements Turkish leaders said the kind of federation they had in mind would not violate the independence and territorial unity of Cyprus, which has about 490,000 Greek Cypriots and 115,000 Turkish Cypriots living in separate enclaves.

Reports said Friday that battles were raging in the northwest of the island and that the Turks moved into four Greek Cypriot villages in the western Kyrenia range.

Juvenile bill bad

On July 1, 1974, only 20 United States representatives voted against H.R. 15276, the Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Act.

The act has a very good name, but the language of the bill will increase delinquency of the worst type.

Your Congress is just throwing money away, which will create more crime, and a half-billion dollars in four years surely will add to inflation.

John Anderson and Tom Railsback did not vote against this bill.

The situation your Congress has created, 500 billion dollars in debt, one would think your Republican representatives would vote 100 per cent for economy in government.

I wonder if they even vote 25 per cent economy.

This act referred to as J.D. suggests the juvenile justice is designed to achieve treatment and rehabilitation of convicted murderers and rapists and is the best method instead of severe punishment.

Juveniles or adults laugh about the ease with which they get away with crime. They have no fear of punishment, but if every criminal was given quick and just punishment crime would soon stop.

If Congress wanted to stop murder it would pass a law stating that anyone committing murder would forfeit their own life in 48 hours after conviction, either by firing squad, electric chair or hanging. There could be special courts assigned to try all murderers at once. No postponements. Any judge who passed sentence different from the law would immediately be brought before a Congressional board which would sentence the judge to 10 years' imprisonment.

This should be given a few years' trial to see what the results would be in protecting the lives of good citizens.

How not to solve inflation problems

By DON OAKLEY

Americans are getting the kind of inflation they deserve. The rising cost of living is largely the public's fault because of its "endless demands" for things to spend money on.

Or so alleges Herbert Stein, outgoing head of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, who recommends against putting more billions in the hands of the people in the form of a tax cut because they would only go out and spend it.

This idea that consumer spending fuels inflation was reiterated by President Nixon in his address in Los Angeles the other day when, among other anti-inflationary tactics outlined, he urged Americans to try to save as much as they could out of their budgets.

Neither admonition is likely to win enthusiastic endorsement anywhere west of the Potomac or east of Los Angeles. In fact, if a recent public opinion poll is an indication of popular sentiment, most people now blame the government for our present economic fix.

A survey by Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, N.J., found that 58 per cent of the general public now rates government as the "principal cause" of inflation. Among union members, the figures is 61 per cent.

The survey was sponsored by The Business Roundtable, an organization of executives that seeks to bolster efforts to curb inflation, improve labor-management relations and promote sound economic growth. It was the ninth in a series designed to explore popular thinking on these issues.

Labor and business were also listed as factors in inflation and each has held responsible by 21 per cent of those polled. Only 15 months earlier, however, 30 per cent of the public rated labor as the chief cause of inflation and 24 per cent said it was business.

In sum, the survey confirms that public opinion is moving away from the concept that the government should exert pressure on unions to keep their demands down and on business to hold the line on prices. Rather, the trend is to lay an increasing share of blame for inflation on the government itself.

There is, of course, much truth in what the President said. It reflects the classic definition of inflation as too much money chasing too few goods. We have seen two outstanding examples of this in the past year—the meat shortage and the oil crisis.

In both cases, however, the shortages—and consequent soaring prices—were artificially induced because producers deliberately withheld their products from the market, and in the case of oil, arbitrarily raised their charges.

Anyway, in classical economics, "demand-push" inflation is supposed to be a self-correcting process. When demand exceeds supply, prices do go up. But higher prices stimulate greater production, which eventually results in lower prices.

The President also emphasized the need to increase production of commodities while curbing demand. But if millions of Americans were to decide against, say, buying a new living room sofa, it is difficult to see how this would encourage the production of furniture.

At the same time the government's own monetary policies work against increased production. Businesses all across the board have been forced to postpone plans for expansion because of the tight money supply and the staggering cost of interest.

Housing is the prime example of how complicated this problem of inflation is. Higher wages for craftsmen, scarcities of materials and tight money—all have contributed to the inflated cost of housing that has now put a decent home out of the reach of millions who can hardly be said to have more money than they know what to do with.

Well, you pay your money and you take your choice of whom to blame for the fact that it doesn't go very far anymore. In the meantime, inflation continues on its merry way and nobody really seems to know how to stop it.

Can the impossible become real?

WASHINGTON (NEA)—Richard Nixon may be losing all the battles lately, but there are macabre whispers here that he still has an "atomic" way to win the war. Today or tomorrow the President could simply declare his emergency a national emergency and then, by decree, seize all communications media, commandeer all power plants, confiscate the control of transportation and transportation routes—and perhaps even stop the impeachment proceedings in Congress.

Impossible in America? Not at all. According to authority granted by Congress, the President has the right and obligation to suspend much of the nation's Constitution in the event he and he alone deems it necessary. Until now these powers have been ignored or shrugged off by most Americans. But the times give them new meaning. An autocratic President, battered by adverse court and congressional decisions, could well become an American king.

Actually there is nothing new about the situation, only about its relevance. The day after Franklin Roosevelt took office in his first term, 1933, Congress began a process of handing over emergency controls to the Executive Office. Since then, says a Senate committee formed to investigate the matter, legislators have granted Presidents some 470 major emergency powers.

Some of the powers have in fact been continuously in force since FDR's era. U.S. citizens are not allowed to trade with the enemy or travel to restricted areas of the world. The Defense Department regularly (277 times in 1970) negotiates contracts without observing the laws of competitive bids. During one recent and confusing stretch, Americans were forced to suspend capitalism and live with price and wage controls. "No doubt about it," says an interested Representative, "in some ways we're already living under a dictatorship."

But it could get much worse if the President wished. No one of responsibility suggests that Richard Nixon contemplates the thought, but given the hard legal facts the scenario is unavoidable. Says a top Democrat, a Nixon enemy: "Suppose a President decided impeachment was too close. All he'd have to do is take to the air and announce that the nation's government, thus its security, was coming unglued. For the reason, he would say, he was declaring state of martial law and that any citizen contributing to a breakdown of order, including congressmen, would be jailed without trial."

No doubt such a move would be decidedly unwelcome in the land. And probably defeated by mass insistence. Even if a President received cooperation from his military commanders, the Republic's individual soldiers would likely rebel. Vigilantism might result—a threat in itself—but the eventual outcome would be a suddenly impeached and convicted Executive as well as a badly wounded America.

Yet the prospects for a happy ending to such a predicament are not enough. Two years ago the Senate named a Special Committee on the "Termination of National Emergency" to look into the ways of reform. William Miller, committee director, says the emergency powers are a threat to every citizen and a loathsome blot on the Constitution; he also says the committee work is almost complete and a bill of repeal is being prepared for hasty presentation to Congress.

Unfortunately, the repeal proposal may arrive on the Hill at just about the same time as the motion to impeach. Naturally, the latter would take precedence; all normal business in the House will cease for the impeachment question. Therefore, Miller says glumly, activity on emergency powers is still a few miles downroad.

Oil still a good buy

According to an article in Oil and Gas Journal, crude oil and natural gas are still good buys in today's marketplace. To prove it, a geologist in Texas roamed the aisles of local stores and computed the per-gallon cost of a number of common items. For instance:

100-proof "Old Confidence"—$30 a gallon; baby lotion—$7.92; orange juice—$1.85; milk—$1.65; honey—$1; laundry bleach—$.58; distilled water—$.49.

By comparison, crude oil is officially price-controlled at 12½ cents a gallon and natural gas (with its heating value converted to crude oil equivalent) is 3 cents a gallon.

It sure is lucky that we don't have to heat the house with baby lotion or run the family jalopy on orange juice.

Wringing inflation out of economy

WASHINGTON (LENS)—There is now little doubt that the general public, and most politicians, regard inflation as a far more serious problem for the American economy than sluggish output and a moderate amount of unemployment.

It is a reflection of these extraordinary times that a certain satisfaction can be taken from the decline in the annual rate of consumer price increases from 14.2 per cent in the first quarter of this year to 10.9 per cent in the second, and from the comparable decline in the "deflator" for the gross national product from 12.3 to 8.8 per cent: in normal circumstances even the second quarter figures would have been regarded as horrifying.

Much of the improvement has come from a tapering off in the rise of energy prices, which was at its maximum in the winter months, and a slowing in the increase in food prices, though on the commodity markets grain prices have started up again because growing conditions have been less than ideal.

In any event, about the most optimistic inflation prediction—the government's—puts the rate at 7 per cent in the final quarter of the year, with only slow and moderate improvement in 1975. The chief reason for this glum outlook is that wages are now apparently taking their turn as the culprit, and for understandable reasons.

While the real income of farmers and foreign oil producers rose, the real buying power of the average worker's wages declined by about 5 per cent in the 12 months to April, so it is hardly surprising that there is now a near-record number of strikes (most of them involving relatively few workers) or that settlements are running in the neighborhood of 10 per cent a year.

The Administration's plan for gradually wringing the inflation out of the system has been well publicized but is not necessarily well understood. It is to use fiscal and monetary policy in such a way as to run the economy below its potential for as long as it takes to reduce inflation—probably several years—and to accept a rate of unemployment well above 5 per cent of the labor force indefinitely.

In practice this means an effort to reduce the estimated $11 billion deficit in the budget this year by trimming spending where possible, and a decision, already announced by the President, to achieve a balanced budget in the next fiscal year, which begins on July 1, 1975.

For monetary policy the target seems to be growth in the narrowly defined money supply of about 6 per cent his year and possibly less next year, and letting interest rates go where they may. They have already gone to record levels with a 12 per cent "prime" lending rate for the banks' most credit-worthy customers and a number of corporate and municipal bond issues postponed because rates were so high.

All of this is painful and it has produced cries of anguish from Democratic and some Republican politicians, but not many convincing proposals for doing things differently. A group of seven leading Democratic economists, including such men as Walter Heller and Paul Samuelson, recently submitted to the Democratic steering committee of the House of Representatives a document that began as follows:

"The economy is in the worst trouble since World War II. We are in the midst of the biggest peacetime inflation in our history; unemployment is high, and for at least another year we are likely to grow far less than our potential. Interest rates are at all-time records and the financial system is in serious danger. Real wages have suffered large declines while profits have been inflating in a nonsustainable way."

Their proposals, however, were hardly radical. They, too, supported fiscal and monetary policies designed to produce "a level of aggregate demand that will carefully simmer down the boiling inflation."

They urged a change in the tax structure to favor taxpayers with low incomes as against those with high incomes, but they did not ask for a significant tax reduction to spur demand and increase lagging production.

The news on the output and employment front, while scarcely good, is not as bad as might have been feared. The gross national product, according to preliminary figures, dipped at a rate of 1.2 per cent, at an annual rate, in the second quarter; this was not only far less than the 7 per cent decline in the first quarter, but also it was caused to a considerable extent by the technical effect on the GNP of the increase in oil imports after the end of the Arab embargo. This sharply reduced the component of GNP called "net exports" but was actually a plus for the economy.

Industrial production rose a little in the second quarter, reflecting mainly some recovery in the production of automobiles. The rate of unemployment, somewhat surprisingly, has not risen but has hovered between 5 and 5.2 per cent since the beginning of the year, while there has been a modest growth in total employment.

If, as expected the GNP turns upward in the current quarter, it is doubtful that the official judge, the National Bureau of Economic Research, will declare 1974 to be a "recession" year even though the GNP declined for two consecutive quarters.

It is important to recognize that demand is still very strong in much of the economy and backlogs of manufacturing orders are at record levels; for example, steel shipments in the first five months set an all-time record.

While there is fairly general agreement among the forecasters that output will be growing in the second half of 1974, most of them see the growth as very sluggish, with an inevitable rise of unemployment.

High interest rates and the resulting flow of funds out of thrift institutions, the chief source of funds for home mortgages, have dealt a severe blow to housebuilding, although the pace of new construction did turn up a bit in June.

Consumer buying is hardly robust, though it has not collapsed as the various indices of consumer sentiment seemed to suggest it might. Business investment in plant and equipment remains strong, but there are a few signs that conditions in the capital markets—low share prices and record-high interest rates on fixed-interest securities—are beginning to affect investment plans.

In short, there is little reason to expect a strong recovery in the economy as a whole, and a further decline in the GNP is a possibility.

This outlook does not trouble such men as Alan Greenspan, who has been nominated this week to succeed Herbert Stein as chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. Like many others, he believes that the structure of the American financial system cannot long survive inflation at the recent rate; and he sees no alternative to fiscal and monetary restraint to reduce inflation.

In this view, the less real growth during the next 18 months, the more progress there will be towards greater price stability.

While the general public would probably approve this "trade-off" if its opinion were sought, it remains to be seen what Congress will do, or try to do, when unemployment begins to approach 6 per cent.

Apart from a possible enlargement of the present modest program of subsidizing jobs in the public service of states and cities, the Administration appears determined not to be panicked into a new expansionary program as it was in 1971.

The world might as well accept the prospect of a very sluggish American economy for a long time to come.

Old commercials just never die

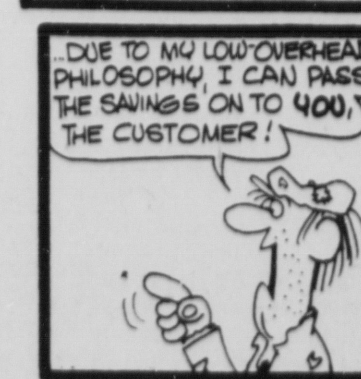

If you've ever wondered what happens to old television commercials, and you probably haven't, a lot of them are finding useful retirement in Tucson, where the University of Arizona is establishing an archive.

Advertising agencies and sponsors have already donated more than 1,000 commercials to the collection. Spanning 25 years of history and documenting the rise of the "affluent society," they're considered irreplaceable cultural artifacts and valuable research material.

It gives one a good feeling to know that somewhere in this fair land, those attractive people we once knew will puff happily away on cigarettes forever, on film or tape, anyway—that future researchers will see just how Americans conquered the scourges of underarm odor and stomach distress, that coming generations will be able to share the joy of the mid-20th-century, prelib housewife in her sparkling kitchen floor and her triumph over balky sink drains and stubborn dirt and stains, etc.

Race not over

By RAY CROMLEY

Despite public assurances by the Defense Department that current U.S. intercontinental missiles are technically superior to those of the Soviet Union, no such sure knowledge is really available here.

There is no conclusive evidence one way or the other as to whether one or more of the new Soviet ICBM family is qualitatively superior in accuracy and invulnerability to U.S. counter-weapons.

The first phase of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks agreement, commonly called SALT I, has not slowed the Soviet side of the arms race. It may have spurred the pace of their development.

Ceilings on intercontinental missiles and missile submarines were set so high they imposed no visible restraint on what the Kremlin leadership might build for some time to come.

The wording of the treaty also gave impetus to the Russians to quickly build to that limit and to invest heavily in upgrading their weapons systems. If by late 1977 the Soviet Union can build to their ceilings with weapons of advanced technical quality, they will be in a position when SALT I expires that year to demand their superiority be continued in whatever treaty is signed at that time.

For the ceilings in SALT I did set a precedent—fixing Soviet missile and missile-sub levels higher than American. The tenor of recent talks indicates Soviet determination to perpetuate that precedent.

Current Soviet negotiators are tough and unbending. They make it clear in actions, if not words, that the Kremlin expects no meaningful new agreement now unless the U.S. will stipulate cutbacks and hold-downs in our intercontinental forces which would build in a U.S. inferiority greater than that which any U.S. president could accept.

Moscow assuredly knows this. The only reasonable interpretation of their demands, therefore, is that Premier Leonid Brezhnev is satisfied with SALT I and inclined to let that arrangement run its course to 1977. Serious negotiations are unlikely under present circumstances until 1976.

This attitude did not prevent the signing of a form of cosmetic agreement at the end of President Nixon's Moscow visit, one which set limits so high as to be meaningless on MIRVs missiles with several warheads, each of which can be aimed at a different target, and other systems which count.

Family still rebuilding from Decatur tornado

By SKIP WOLLENBERG
Associated Press Writer
DECATUR, Ill. (AP) — Everitt Mitchell and his family have been living in a mobile trailer this summer, but it has been no vacation.
"We've been slaving away trying to build ourselves a new home," said Mitchell, 39, a plant manager at the Caterpillar Tractor Co.
A tornado twisted the houses and lives of several hundred residents on the city's West Side April 3 and the neighborhood will never be the same.
Mobile trailer homes, provided by insurance companies as temporary housing, dot the section where Mitchell lives.
Thirteen ranch style, $30,000 homes like that of the Mitchells were damaged beyond repair by the tornado.
"I wouldn't give you a nickel for all the mobile trailers in the world," Mitchell said. "But then again, it's close enough to our property so you can just get up in the morning and start to work rebuilding."
Although Mitchell has hired a contractor to build the new home, his wife, Marty, says he gets up at 7 a.m. each day to help. He puts in eight hours working on the house and then leaves for the night shift at the Caterpillar plant.
The tornado left other than physical scars on the west side neighborhood.
Four families have moved away, and Mrs. Mitchell recalls one woman who seemed overly apprehensive at any change in the weather after the April 3 tornado.

"The mother would come by our trailer whenever it clouded up," Mrs. Mitchell said. "She'd be carrying her purse like she was ready to go, and her children would all be wearing raincoats."
"It was terrible," she added. "She always had her children so excited. My daughter used to worry a little about the weather, but that stopped some when she saw how foolish it was to get so excited about the weather."
The Mitchells have been more fortunate than some of the neighbors.
One family won't be able to move into its new home until October.
Another family moved several miles away to a small town north of Decatur, Mitchell said, where high winds tore down a nearly completed home they were building there.
"You can't run away from the weather. It could hit here again, but it could hit you wherever you move to, so it's not worth worrying about," he said.
Mitchell hopes to move his family into a new two-story colonial style home by the end of the month.
Mitchell figures the tornado cost him at least $20,000.
"We found that our insurance was good for about $5,000 less than it would cost to replace the old home. We came up $5,000 short on insurance coverage for our personal items, like furniture clothing," he said.
The new house will cost $10,000 more than the old one.

The Worry Clinic

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE
CASE B-606: Malcolm R., aged 48, is now a famous city pastor.
"Dr. Crane," he began, "I was at Garrett Biblical Institute when you lectured there. And I joined the rest of the audience in vigorous applause when you said seminary students should get a doctor's degree upon graduation."
"President Horace Smith later told you that Garrett wasn't chartered to offer earned doctorates, but you urged him to amend his charter and offer the D.D. as an earned degree.

"Well, he never made any attempt to follow your suggestions."
"But we seminarians appreciated your saying that physicians get an M.D. and dental surgeons a D.D.S. with no more college training than seminary graduates."
"For we put in four years at Liberal Arts Colleges, then three more years in graduate school."
"You told Dr. Smith that if he felt we should serve a pastoral internship for a year, add that to the requirement, but you steadfastly claimed seminaries were doing their graduates a gross injustice."

"For, after three years of graduate study, we then obtained only a bachelors degree (B.D.) and that isn't a prestige conversational 'handle,' as you explained."
"Well, Dr. Crane, at your constant urging, you must be happy to realize that seminaries are now awarding doctoral degrees."
"It has taken 20 years of your vigorous newspaper challenges of the seminaries, but at last clergymen are getting a doctorate."
"The California Graduate School of Theology really put a burr under the saddle of other seminaries."
"For it not only offered a doctorate for three years of graduate theological study.

"But agreed to honor any B.D. granted by other seminaries and with one year's additional attendance at seminaries, to add the D.D. or a similar doctorate."
Seminary Politics
A generation ago, seminaries restricted their honorary D.D. to certain distinguished former graduates who fulfilled these criteria:
(1) The D.D. recipients had married the bishop's daughter or otherwise had established political leverage with the seminary;
(2) They had persuaded some wealthy parishioner to bequeath $100,000 to the seminary or to endow a "chair" thereat;

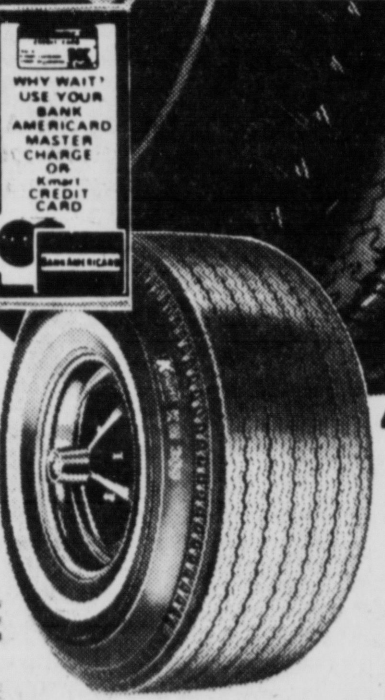

(3) They had invited the president of the seminary and/or other key faculty members to be guest sermonizers in their large city pulpits.
Obviously, these clergymen who obtained the D.D. by one or another of those standard techniques, were usually pretty shrewd operators.
But often no more deserving of a D.D. than dozens of their equally distinguished classmates.
Alas, when I began urging in this "Worry Clinic" that all 3-year seminary graduates be granted the D.D. as an "earned" doctorate, just like the D.D.S. or M.D., those clergy who had wrangled their D.D. previously, were quite cool to my idea!

And you can see why!
But a doctorate is a "handle" that testifies to the clergyman's seven years of academic training and thus sets him apart from some emotional sects with preachers who never finished high school.

Vows are exchanged

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Roberts, Dixon, was the setting for the July 14 marriage of their daughter, Diane, to Roger F. Teuscher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fay Teuscher, Warren.

Judge James E. Bales officiated as vows were exchanged by the couple at 11:30 a.m. before a fireplace mantel decorated with arrangements of pink and white roses, carnations and baby's breath.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a floor-length gown of pastel-blue chiffon fashioned with a long-sleeved empire bodice featuring a tucked yoke edged with eggshell lace, and she carried a single long-stemmed pink rose.

David Burrows, DeKalb, served the bridegroom as best man, and Mrs. Phillip Lennon, Dixon, who attended her sister-in-law as matron of honor, wore a full-length gown of pink jersey complemented by a corsage of roses.

The double-ring family ceremony preceded a luncheon for members of the wedding party and a champagne reception at Emerald Hill Country Club when guests were registered by Miss Linda Slothower, Iowa City, Iowa.

The new Mrs. Teuscher, a graduate of the University of Iowa, is presently completing requirements for a master's degree in medical-surgical nursing, and she will be employed as an instructor of students enrolled in the Freeport Memorial Hospital School of Nursing.

Her husband, who received a baccalaureate degree at Carroll College and a master's degree in guidance and counseling at the University of Wisconsin, Platteville, Wis., is principal of the Warren Community School Unit District No. 205.

Following their return from a wedding trip to Barbados, Martinique and St. Thomas, the newlyweds will be residing in Warren.

MR. AND MRS. ROGER F. TEUSCHER

Dear Ann
by Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: May I add my nickel's worth and straighten out some misconceptions regarding "mercy killing" or euthanasia?

Since Americans are guaranteed by the Constitution the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, should it not also include the right to die if it means a release from suffering?

Many people who insist they are against euthanasia are not aware that there are two kinds: (1) Active, which means "putting someone to sleep" by administering drugs, and (2) Passive, the withdrawal of all medical or mechanical support, without which the patient would die.

Euthanasia need not be administered. If it were legalized, it would be on an individual basis, left up to the patient and the immediate family. There would be a signed legal document and the consent of at least two physicians would be required.

For those who are concerned with the religious aspects, this is what Pope Pius XII said: "The removal of pain and consciousness by means of drugs, when medical authorities suggest it, is permitted by religion and morality to both doctors and patient, even if the use of drugs will shorten life."

I hope I have shed some light on this controversial subject and that people will stop using the words "murder" and "sin" when speaking of euthanasia.—H.B., Orlando, Fla.

Dear H.B.: Thank you for your letter. I am opposed to active euthanasia, but consider your definition of the passive type a humane approach to end the suffering of terminally ill patients for whom there is no hope.

The only danger, as I see it, is that conniving relatives might conceivably make a deal with a couple of unscrupulous doctors in order to come into an inheritance or relieve themselves of an unwanted burden BEFORE the patient reaches the critical or irreversible stage.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently our "good friend" and family lawyer settled my mother's estate (proper will, savings account, checking account, and a small safety deposit box). The grand total was $4,000. The lawyer charged us $2,000 for his services.

I never had dollar signs in my eyes for my mother's money. She was a woman of modest means and she lived frugally. (Incidentally, the estate must be divided among three of us.) I'd like to know if there is any way a person can arrange his estate so a lawyer won't get one cent?—Burned By Reality

Dear B.: First things first. When a client believes he has been overcharged by a lawyer, he can take his grievance to the local bar association.

Next: As for avoiding the problem in the future, see an estate planner (almost every bank has one) and discuss methods that best suit your situation. Lawyers, of course, serve a valuable function, but there is nothing wrong with asking in advance about the fee—even if the guy is "a friend."

Confidential to Little Did I Know: Everybody marries for love—of something. You married for the love of jewelry, expensive clothes, a beautiful home—etc., etc. Some women feel a life of luxury is worth whatever they have to sacrifice to get it, but I've received a great many letters from others who say marrying for money is the hardest work there is.

Turkey Cutlets Potato Puff
Broccoli Salad
Nectarines with Brandy
Sauce
NECTARINES WITH BRANDY SAUCE
1/2 cup light cream
Dash of salt
Pinch of nutmeg
2 egg yolks
3 tablespoons confectioners' sugar
1/2 cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons brandy
6 fresh nectarines

In the top of a double boiler over direct heat, heat the cream with the salt and nutmeg but do not boil. In a small mixing bowl beat the egg yolks with the sugar to blend; stir in a little of the hot cream; stir back into double-boiler top. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly, until mixture coats a silver spoon. Cover and chill. Beat cream until stiff, adding the brandy; fold into sauce. Pare, pit and slice nectarines into serving dishes; spoon the sauce over the fruit. Makes 6 servings.

Add flavor to sandwich with pineapple

Pineapple slices and cheese are a pleasing combination. They make good toppings for a very different sandwich that is easy to make. Pineapple, cheese and bacon slices top lettuce rafts and the "sandwich" is slipped under the broiler for quick cooking. This is a refreshing change from basic sandwiches.

Broiled Iceberg Sandwich

1 head western iceberg lettuce
1 cup grated American or Monterey Jack cheese
1 can (8-1/2 ounces) pineapple slices, well drained
Catsup
6 slices bacon

Core, rinse and thoroughly drain lettuce; chill in disposable plastic bag or lettuce "crisp-it." Cut 4 crosswise slices or "rafts" each about 1-1/4 inches thick. Refrigerate first and last cuts of lettuce head in plastic bag for use in salads or sandwiches. Place lettuce "rafts" on cookie sheet. Divide cheese and sprinkle evenly over "rafts." Top with pineapple slices; fill centers of slices with catsup. Cut bacon slices into halves; place 3 halves atop each pineapple slice. Broil about 4 inches from heat about 5 minutes until bacon is cooked and cheese starts to melt. Serve hot. Makes 4 servings.

Fruit flavor

1/2 teaspoon on grapefruit or watermelon.

For a sweeter dressing, usual for most fruit salads, stir 1/4 cup quickly dissolved powdered sugar into 1 cup commercial french dressing. The sugar, besides sweetening, intensifies the natural flavors of any fresh fruit.

Decorate with hanging planters

Most commercial growers of hanging plants today use a molded plastic container which has a drip-tray attached. This makes for a lighter planter as well as a convenient one for both indoors and out. These containers are also available for planting your own hanging gardens and can be spray painted to tie-in with your decor.

Today, there are hundreds of plants—foliage and flowering—available for hanging baskets. If you wish color, try geraniums, for instance, or a colorful foliage plant like coleus. Fuchsias, ivy geraniums, and tuberous begonias are excellent flowering plants for hanging baskets, as well as lantana, cascading petunias, impatiens, and bougainvillea.

As for foliage plants, a smorgasbord of textures, colorings and moods awaits you... from the common deep green philodendron to the unusual variegated chlorophytum (spider plant) with its graceful pendant plantlets. Many of the ivies are very popular for hanging baskets, such as English ivy and grape ivy. For a light, airy quality, two of the asparagus fern varieties—sprengeri and plumosus—are favorites.

The feathery texture and symmetrical rosette growth of ferns is what makes them so appealing and so ideally suited for hanging gardens. The rabbit's-foot fern is an excellent choice because of its lush, dense growth, and you can't go wrong with any of the varieties of sword fern.

Some of the other choice plants to look for are hoyo carnosa (wax plant) with its thick, wax-like leaves... gynura aurantiaca (velvet plant) with its fuzzy purple leaves... and varieties of tradescantia and zebra (both called wandering jew) with their glistening foliage in an array of colors.

Most plants of the type suitable for hanging baskets are extremely easy to maintain. Like any other potted plants, they need watering, trimming and fertilizing to grow well. Select plants that are compatible with the location you plan to put them in. There are plants for all exposures—Shade, semi-shade and full sun.

Hanging gardens are a versatile way of using nature's beauty for home decor. They are a unique accent to any room in the house... and outdoors, on the patio, porch or terrace, there is no better decoration than hanging baskets.

Ideal salad for a summer picnic

By AILEEN CLAIRE

Molded salads make shimmering and satisfying additions to picnics and pitch-ins. Late summer months always are get-together times and a Ham and Egg Salad can be made ahead, ready to go into the picnic cooler with garnishes and dessert. Set in a lemon-flavored gelatin, this combination is always refreshing eating.

- HAM AND EGG SALAD
- 2 packages (3 ounces each) or 1 package (6 ounces) lemon flavor gelatin
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 2 cups boiling water
 - 1 1/4 cups cold water
 - 2 tablespoons vinegar
 - 2 cups finely diced cooked ham
 - 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
 - 1/2 cup chopped dill pickles
 - 1/2 cup diced celery
 - 2 hard-cooked eggs, quartered
 - 1 cup mayonnaise
 - 2 teaspoons prepared mustard

Dissolve gelatin and salt in boiling water. Add cold water and vinegar. Chill until slightly thickened. Fold in ham, chopped eggs, pickles, and celery. Pour into 6-cup mold or a 9x5-inch loaf pan. Chill until firm—at least 5 hours or overnight. Unmold, and garnish with the quartered eggs. Serve on crisp salad greens, with tomato wedges and cooked asparagus spears, if desired. Combine mayonnaise and mustard and serve with salad. Makes 6 cups or 6 entree servings.

The birthdays of Mrs. Vern Stafford, Dixon, and her granddaughter, Mrs. Lynne Schriener, Mt. Morris, were celebrated at a recent surprise party in Mt. Morris when guests from Dixon included Mrs. Beulah Whitmyer, Margaret Stafford, Tony Lybarger, Paul Edward Stafford, Mrs. Roger Wolber and son, Roger Jr.

Additional guests were Mrs. June Mangan, Como; Mrs. Clarice Harris, Morrison; Mrs. Marietta McKenna, Mrs. Marilyn Mangan and daughters, Michelle, Melissa, Melany and Mindy Rae, Rock Falls; Mrs. Grace Embick, Miss Alicia Schriener, Mrs. Jackie McGrill and Marion, Mt. Morris.

Tough defense kills overbid

The best thing we can say about South's jump to four hearts is that it showed optimism. Actually, three hearts would have been an overbid.

However, the overbid would have paid off if East and West hadn't come up with some really fine defense.

East won the first two tricks with the king and queen of diamonds. West dropped his jack on the second lead to show that he had led third best from three rather than fourth best from four.

This gave East a chance to make the killing play. He led a third diamond. South could do nothing better than ruff in dummy. This left only two trumps there. He could set the clubs up but wouldn't be able to run them because West would be holding one extra trump.

South did give the hand the old college try. He cashed four trumps; went to dummy with a club and led a spade toward his king. Unfortunately for him East had hung on to all his spades and was careful to play the 10. Thus South wound up losing two spade tricks.

If East had made the apparently normal defense of shifting to a trump at trick two or three, South would have set up clubs, drawn trumps, stopping in dummy with the third lead, discarded one spade and one diamond on the last two clubs and wound up with game and rubber.

Refreshments were served from a table centered by blue candles in crystal holders and an arrangement of blue Shasta daisies, and hostesses for the event were Mrs. Daniel Todhunter, Mrs. Vincent Peska, Mrs. Robert Minor, Mrs. Andrew Laidig, Mrs. Henry Janssen, Mrs. Edna Wilson, Mrs. Quinten Harms, Mrs. John L. Miller, Mrs. Carl Schnake, Mrs. Donald Baker and Mrs. Harry Unterzuber.

Attending the party were approximately 40 guests from Nelson, Rock Falls, Dixon, Sterling and Morrison, and gifts were sent to the shower by 31 guests unable to attend.

History of coffee

NEW YORK (AP) — We discuss it, dote on it, and delight in it. A "break" for it is an American institution. Some people can't even speak before they have it. We take pride in making it perfect, even though some of us boil it, spoil it and discard it in dismay.

It's coffee, of course, and for millions of us it's as important as breathing. But there's more to coffee than just the making and drinking. It actually has a history all its own, researchers at Melitta, a filter coffeemaker manufacturer, have found.

The exhilarating effects of coffee were first discovered by an ancient goatherd who discovered his goats blissfully prancing about after munching on coffee leaves.

America was greatly enhanced after the Boston Tea Party, when it was considered disloyal to drink tea, which up until that time was the favored beverage.

It requires about 2,000 hand-picked coffee cherries to provide enough beans for one pound of roasted coffee.

The first coffee street vendor in America was a woman. Dorothy Jones sold her home-brewed coffee in the streets of Boston in 1670.

It is not true that coffee is never grown in the United States. There are actually a few pampered coffee shrubs thriving among the towering skyscrapers of New York City's Wall Street.

Perhaps the strangest coffee-break occurred when Stanley came across explorer Dr. Livingston in the wilds of Africa, and greeted him with "Dr. Livingston, I presume." The doctor casually replied "Just in time for coffee, Stanley."

Coffee has been a theme in many popular songs, but the most famous composer to glorify the beverage was J. S. Bach, an avid coffee drinker, who, in the 18th century, wrote "The Coffee Cantata" as an entertainment for the opening of a friend's coffee house.

Mrs. Jones is honored at shower

NELSON — Mrs. Kenneth Jones Jr., was guest of honor at a postnuptial bridal shower Tuesday night in the Nelson Grade School Auditorium.

Prizes won in games of 500 and bingo by Mrs. Mamie Peska, Mrs. Earle Stitzel, Mrs. Ernest Granter and Mrs. Jack Sampson were presented to the honoree, who was assisted at the gift table by Mrs. Roger Hamilton and Miss Melissa Minor.

Refreshments were served from a table centered by blue candles in crystal holders and an arrangement of blue Shasta daisies, and hostesses for the event were Mrs. Daniel Todhunter, Mrs. Vincent Peska, Mrs. Robert Minor, Mrs. Andrew Laidig, Mrs. Henry Janssen, Mrs. Edna Wilson, Mrs. Quinten Harms, Mrs. John L. Miller, Mrs. Carl Schnake, Mrs. Donald Baker and Mrs. Harry Unterzuber.

are a poignant item of unfinished business in the Vietnam conflict. Estimates of the number of war orphans range up to 700,000, those abandoned by American fathers to 25,000. In refugee camps, children make up 50 per cent of the population. Tackling this immense problem the International Rescue Committee, which has been extending a helping hand to refugees around the world since 1933, continues on American presence in South Vietnam with a network of medical and day-care centers. A major function is to restore the health of war orphans, enabling many to qualify for adoption by American families.

Following their leader, refugee children combine play and exercise in a Saigon day-care center.

Opened in December 1973, 70-bed IRC medical rehabilitation center serves five American adoption agencies operating in Vietnam. Dr. Andre Noe, right, chief pediatrician, examines a newly admitted 3-year-old.

Cars to carry mileage figures on stickers

DETROIT (AP) — For the first time, consumers will be able to find out this fall what gasoline mileage they can expect from most new cars by looking at the sticker on vehicles in the showroom.

General Motors joined Ford Motor Co. on Thursday in agreeing to voluntarily post the federal gasoline mileage test results on their 1975 models, which debut next month.

The Environmental Protection Agency prodded the automakers to participate in the voluntary program by threatening to seek federal legislation making it mandatory.

Chrysler Corp. hasn't decided yet whether it will go along with the nation's two largest automakers. American Motors has refused to post the federal figures, saying it disagrees with the federal test system.

AMC has complained that the EPA's test procedures do not produce results that reflect the kind of mileage the average driver would get. The EPA rates fuel economy on the same laboratory equipment used to measure exhaust emissions. AMC and others have argued that actual road tests would provide more accurate mileage figures than laboratory testing.

But the large majority of domestic models will contain the sticker information, and at least six importers, including Toyota, Aston Martin, British Leyland, Bricklin, BMW and Rolls Royce already have said they will participate in the program.

A GM spokesman said the test procedures for 1975 models are an improvement over the 1974 methods and represent "the best available way of doing mileage ratings." EPA is the only government agency making gasoline mileage determinations.

The new label information will go far beyond the vague statements included on stickers of Big Three cars during the current model year.

This year, the labels indicated only what mileage a car of the same weight could be expected to get. For example, a shopper would learn that a car weighing 3,000 pounds travels between nine and 20 miles per gallon in city traffic.

Under the new plan, average mileage figures on the actual model will be displayed on the sticker. In addition, fuel consumption will be listed for two test runs—one on the highway and one on urban streets.

For example, one label might indicate that the full-size "Brand X" car with an eight-cylinder engine averages 12 miles per gallon for city driving and 18 m.p.g. on the highway.

The new fuel economy label information will distinguish between cars of the same model equipped with different engines. Other factors like options, which affect fuel mileage to a lesser extent, would be disregarded.

Anonymous rose donor remembers 1759 battle

CHICAGO (AP) — Who remembers the Battle of Minden, Aug. 1 1759?

If no one else, there is one man in Chicago who does. He has sent six red roses each Aug. 1 for as long as anyone can remember to the British Consulate with this note: "In Memoriam, Battle of Minden."

They call it "The Great Rose Mystery" and the British Consul General Ralph Daniell said, "We believe if the man doesn't want us to know who he is, we'll respect that."

The roses arrived on schedule at the consulate at 10:45 a.m. Thursday.

The case is clearly one for the Baker Street Irregulars, a group of Sherlock Holmes devotees.

The suspect is about 55 years old, of thin to medium build, well dressed and speaks with a British accent (perhaps affected).

He purchased the flowers at a reputable florist in Chicago's Loop from one clerk, Joe Pilch, who disclaimed any knowledge of the man because the bouquet purchase was a cash transaction.

Consul Daniell said six roses would be a natural memorial for the Battle of Minden, when six regiments of Anglo-Allied troops tramped through a rose field to defeat the French near Minden, a town in the German state of Westphalia.

The soldiers reportedly plucked roses to wear in their hats and the regiments continue the tradition till today. Daniell described the battle as "one of the brightest days in the history of the British army."

Triumphant return home for Railsback

MOLINE, Ill. (AP)—With standing ovations, handshakes and high praise, businessmen have welcomed home Rep. Thomas F. Railsback, a leader in the bipartisan House Judiciary Committee effort to impeach President Nixon.

"I believe that at a time like this people should choose between loyalty to party and loyalty to country, and that's why I support you, Tom," said William H. Hewitt, board chairman of Deere & Co., at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon Friday.

More than a dozen persons lined up after the luncheon to shake the Illinois Republican's hand. Many offered congratulations.

"I think you wrote a whole new chapter in good politics," said one man, quietly grasping Railsback's hand.

About 160 tickets were sold for the luncheon, Railsback's first home-district appearance since voting for two articles of impeachment before the Judiciary Committee.

Rock Island County, a heavily pro-labor area where Railsback is expected to gain votes because of his impeachment stand, was the setting for his homecoming.

He has been sharply criticized in the rural counties of the 19th District and told a news conference he would go on the road to explain his position.

"I don't think we've abandoned the President. I think he's abandoned us," he said. "Frankly I don't think the White House is the future of the Republican Party. If it is, then we're in trouble."

Railsback, who hopes for reelection this fall, has been easily reelected since first running for Congress in 1966. His two pro-impeachment votes came on articles accusing the President of involvement in the Watergate coverup and broad abuse of presidential power.

Railsback predicted that 40 per cent of the House Republicans would probably vote to impeach. He said that if a large House majority supports impeachment, he thinks the President "might consider resignation."

"This has been really the most difficult experience of my lifetime and I will be glad when it's over," Railsback told the luncheon gathering.

Secret donation to Mills is unearthed

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Two top executives of a Dallas computer firm secretly gave $100,000 to the presidential campaign of Wilbur D. Mills in 1972, the largest donation yet to surface in the Arkansas Democrat's brief run for the White House.

The computer firm, Electronic Data Systems Corp., processes 75 million health insurance claims annually. Mills is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, which is shaping national health insurance legislation.

The money was given by Mil- ledge A. Hart III, president of the corporation, and Mervin L. Stauffer, a regional vice president.

Hart was reported to be on vacation and unavailable for comment. Stauffer said he gave because "I believe in Mills."

Mills told the Mutual Broad- casting System that he had not heard about the contribution until news reports of it. He said, "No one's found anything wrong with it" and added that he appreciated the donation. He said he saw nothing the executives had to gain because any health insurance program would use bidding for contracts.

The money was funneled through 17 dummy committees with names such as "Students for Better Government" and "Fiscal Sanity Committee" on March 30, 1972, just eight days before such secret donations were outlawed.

The gift, revealed in the open files of the Senate Watergate committee, moved into the Mills campaign about the same time that numerous other $100,000 donations were being given to President Nixon's campaign by other corporation executives.

Several of the Nixon gifts later were revealed to be illegal corporate donations. The finance vice president of EDS, Tom Marcus, denied that the Hart-Stauffer gift came from corporate funds. Stauffer also said his share came from his own pocket. J.D. Williams, a lawyer representing Mills and some of his former campaign workers in connection with Watergate investigations, said so far as he knows the money was legal.

Mills refused to make voluntary disclosure of the sources of his early campaign donations during the presidential primaries, when some other Democratic candidates were making an issue of such secrecy.

The $100,000 gift from Hart and Stauffer was kept under wraps until the Watergate committee made public some bank records of the Mills campaign.

The records show that all 17 committees were set up, starting in December 1971 and continuing into early March, 1972, by a Mills campaign worker, Terry Shea, who allegedly was being paid a corporate salary during part of that time by a large dairy-farmer cooperative, Associated Milk Producers, Inc.

The milk producers pleaded guilty on Thursday to donating $5,000 illegally to the Mills campaign and to paying two other employees to work for Mills.

Hart and Stauffer each gave installments of $3,000 to the 17 committees, except that Stauffer gave only $1,000 to one of the committees to round out the $100,000. Thus Hart gave $51,000 and Stauffer gave $49,000.

Also in the Watergate Committee files, there is evidence of four previously undisclosed cash gifts of $1,000 or more to the Mills campaign.

Lawyer Williams, who also represents oil lobbyist Carl Arnold, said in a letter to the committee that Arnold recalled receiving the cash before secret gifts became illegal, and said Arnold has no reason to believe that the donations were from corporate sources.

Previously, Arnold had delivered a $15,000 donation to the Mills campaign that turned out to be an illegal corporate gift from Gulf Oil Corp. Arnold also had testified that he received some cash from a trucking lobbyist, but couldn't recall exactly how much.

In the letter, Williams said Arnold later had remembered handling four other cash gifts to Mills of from $1,000 to $5,000 each. He said they came from Phil C. Bennett, head of the Washington office of the Kerr-McGee Oil Corp., Charles W. Davis, a Chicago lawyer, Horace R. Kornegay, president of the Tobacco Institute, and Bernard L. Orell, an executive of the Weyerhaeuser Timber Co. of Tacoma, Wash.

The oil and timber industries benefit from depletion allowances in the tax laws, which are handled by Mills' committee.

Today's history

Today is Saturday, Aug. 3, the 215th day of 1974. There are 150 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1492, Christopher Columbus sailed from Spain on the expedition that resulted in the discovery of America.

On this date: In 1780, Benedict Arnold was put in command of the fortifications at West Point, New York, during the American Revolution.

In 1881, British troops occupied the Egyptian town of Suez.

In 1914, Germany declared war on France.

In 1931, the first airliner hijacking was attempted. A man and his son flying from Los Angeles to Houston tried, without success, to divert an airliner to Cuba.

The Drinking Driver's Crash Chart

Drunk driving is a primary cause of at least half of all traffic fatalities. The odds on a drinking driver being involved in a collision rise dramatically with successive drinks. Chart, based on a 160-pound man consuming one-ounce drinks of 86-proof within a two-hour period after eating, shows the cumulative effects of alcohol, with accident probabilities doubling and tripling with successive drinks.

Number of Drinks	Accident Probability (%)

4	16
5	32
6	64
7	128
8	256
9	512

Bars show number of times a driver is more likely to crash after consuming numbers of drinks indicated below. Figures from the Highway Users Federation for Safety and Mobility and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

A Boy Scout for 73 years and he still likes it

PEOTONE, Ill. (AP) — Robert J. Seabright has been "trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean, reverent, physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight" for 73 years.

In fact he has literally been a Boy Scout.

Seabright began his scouting career at age 12 in one of three original troops organized in England by Boy Scout founder Sir Robert S. Baden-Powell. And the 85-year old scout is still at it planning outings and summer camps for Troop 315 in Peotone.

Seabright has won just about every honor a scout can win. He said Thursday that in England he earned enough badges to become a King Scout, the equivalent of an Eagle Scout in America. And he has received a lifetime pioneer certificate.

"To get the certificate I had to live outdoors for one year and with a sleeping bag and waterproof blanket I travelled from one place to another," he said.

In 1970, the lifelong bachelor and retired maintenance worker, was awarded the Silver Beaver, the highest service award in scouting. "He's the backbone of our troop and an inspiration," said Scoutmaster George Swanberg.

But Seabright believes things have changed lately. "Boys now seem to have too many other activities."

In public, there is a reluctance by senators to say anything but the nicest things about Burger, named by Nixon five years ago to succeed Chief Justice Earl Warren.

"The same issue would have been raised if Mr. Warren had been chief justice," said Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, who included several limitations on Burger in his broad proposal to overhaul Senate impeachment rules.

"It is a matter of senatorial prerogative," the Montana Democrat said Thursday. "This is a matter for duly elected senators, to have the responsibility and not to delegate it."

Asked for an explanation of Mansfield's effort, one source recalled that several months ago Mansfield made public a letter to Burger asking that the Supreme Court be kept in session through the summer. The letter drew a prompt rejection from the chief justice.

In addition to taking away the chief justice's authority to break ties on procedural questions, a power exercised twice by Chief Justice Salmon Chase in the 1868 trial of President Andrew Johnson, Mansfield proposed to lay down standards

These include the standards for admission of evidence and for senators to determine whether the impeachment charges had been proved.

By so doing, supporters of the changes hope to spell things out so that Burger's latitude in making rulings would be circumscribed.

However, a bipartisan majority in the Senate Rules Committee apparently believes, after studying the matter this week, that for the most part the present rules should apply.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.V., Mansfield's deputy and the Senate's chief rules expert, said he isn't that concerned about the chief justice.

He noted that, on any procedural ruling, the Senate can override the chief justice. "I think we're all going to be reasonable men, including the chief justice," Byrd said.

In deciding Thursday to work from the current rules, the Rules panel made no decision on possible changes. It appears to be closely divided on the question of whether Burger should vote.

It is also divided on the issue of whether it should set standards for admitting evidence, though that too is a matter the Senate can decide each time a question is raised.

Trade accusations in stalled labor talks

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — General Motors and the United Auto Workers are accusing each other of stalling tactics at the bargaining table in what has become the most drawn-out round of local negotiations in company history.

"The fact is, some of GM's local plant management still are unwilling to negotiate," commented a somewhat exasperated United Auto Workers Vice President Irving Bluestone.

About five miles from UAW headquarters, George B. Morris Jr., GM vice president of industrial relations, sat in his office at corporate headquarters thumbing through a notebook of local strike reports.

"The union sets the pace. If they don't want to meet, there's nothing we can do," he said.

One year after negotiations on new local contracts first got under way, GM and the UAW find themselves without agreements at more than a dozen GM plants around the country.

By the end of July, 14 of 146 locals at GM plants had yet to settle on contracts to replace the old pacts which expired last September. Many of these plants for the first time are completing a full year's production and are about to begin new model output with local labor disputes still pending.

By contrast, Ford Motor Co. has reached contract agreements with all 97 of its UAW locals. Chrysler Corp. reached tentative agreement with all 68 of its locals, although three of the pacts were later rejected by rank-and-file members.

The prospect of strikes during the critical period of GM's new model buildup is relished by neither side. But each also refuses to predict when resolution of the disputes will come.

Bluestone and Morris agree the issues involved in this year's local talks are about the same as in past years. It's the tempo of the talks that has made the difference this time.

The national contract, signed Nov. 19, covers general issues involving wages and fringe benefits. Local agreements, which parallel the three-year national pact, deal with general work conditions, upkeep of facilities and seniority and shift preference agreements at each plant.

Local talks also involve discussion of worker grievances, which both sides will attempt to clear up before a final pact is signed.

Both GM and the UAW blame their current labor headaches on the auto industry's sales slump, spurred by inflation and consumer fears over scarce fuel supplies.

The slump, which reached its low point this winter, caused production cutbacks and mass worker layoffs. Some plants were shut down and 65,000 of the firm's 470,000 workers remain on indefinite layoff.

The situation produced uncertainty among union and company officials and an unwillingness to reach speedy settlements on local contracts until both parties could determine the fate of the industry.

there was a terrible inertia throughout the industry," Morris said. "You had plant shutdowns and layoffs which dampened the spirits of union leaders. They weren't interested in resolving issues seriously.

"Since we were cutting back production anyway, the union figured threats of strikes would be meaningless. Strikes wouldn't be too demoralizing on management ..."

Bluestone conceded local union officials have shown less enthusiasm than in past years to reach speedy settlement of their contract disputes. But he maintained the company has been even slower to respond.

Bluestone also noted that discipline and work speedups have become thornier problems in this year's round of talks than in past sessions.

He said management increasingly has turned to disciplinary actions to "force its will on the workers."

There have been 12 strikes at GM plants this year, most of them since May.

In 1970, when GM was struck nationally, 18 plants remained on strike after the 10-week walkout ended in November of that year. But all local contracts were reached by March 15, 1971.

Seven of the 18 facilities still without settlements are GM assembly division plants, 5 traditionally the last to settle.

Morris and Bluestone both said negotiations at those plants are the most challenging because workers there are the first to be affected by changing market conditions.
